Did you Know?

◀ UDKS is located in CityPlace, the heart of downtown West Palm Beach and services all of South Florida.

Services recognizing current real estate conditions:

approval preservation:

Florida has strong growth management guidelines, including a concept called concurrency, which requires that public services and facilities, including traffic capacity, are in place at the time a project develops. For that reason, many development approvals have phasing or time requirements during which a project is required to move forward. Failure to meet these timetables may result in the revocation or loss of the development approvals. Generally, careful monitoring of development approvals should be maintained, and opportunities for extension requests be utilized to keep approvals in place. UDKS has a history of working with various financial institutions and the Resolution Trust Corporation (RTC) in assessing and maintaining approvals, due diligence and assessment of development potential analysis.

project modifications:

Many current project approvals have been planned, designed, and approved to accommodate a different product than what is currently (or in the foreseeable future) marketable. Site plans and master plans can be modified to meet current needs with housing and non-residential uses that can meet current pricing and market demands. Modifications that can be secured now can set up projects to be ready to go when the market improves. UDKS has the experience to file appropriate applications and manage the process to obtain the necessary approvals.

new land uses for properties:

Florida growth management legislation requires that zoning and development plans be consistent with locally adopted comprehensive plans which establish land use designations for all properties. With changes in the general real estate marketplace, some land uses are no longer appropriate. UDKS has the resources to file applications and represent clients who are seeking the necessary changes to be ready for the eventual upturn in the market.

developments of regional impact (DRI):

Large scale projects in Florida oftentimes exceed DRI thresholds requiring not only local, but regional and state review. These projects require significant pre-approval review and management of numerous phasing and on- and off-site improvement conditions once approved. UDKS is well versed in managing DRI projects, generally as the professional team leader, coordinating the activities of numerous sub-consultants and providing a single point of contact for the client.

general land use, planning and zoning consultation:

The best word to describe UDKS is experience. For more than 30 years, the employees of UDKS have provided consistent, ethical, and educated advice to their clients. In these uncertain times, this experience can help property owners maintain or create value for their properties.

UDKS has been maximizing our clients' entitlements for over 30 years. By helping financial institutions do the same, we relieve them of their burden.
